The last three decades of the 20th century brought unexpected but gratifying advances in democracy all around the globe. Three outdated regimes that were still oppressing people in the 1970's fell or were wiped out in southern Europe. The film looks at this struggle by comparing and contrasting the case of three countries: Spain, Greece and Portugal.

 [DVDA197-S01] 4 x 52 minutes | 2009
Cat: International Literature

Eight years in the making, Empire of the Word is a compelling look inside the act of reading and traces its impact on more than five thousand years of human history. Introduced and narrated by one of the world's great readers, Canadian writer Alberto Manguel, the series traces reading's origins; examines how we learn to read; exposes censors' attempts to prevent our reading; and finally, proposes what the future might hold for this most human of creative acts.

The Pokot people come from north-west Kenya and a part of Uganda. Proud and fiercely independent, the Pokot are bearers of an ancient culture with some well-entrenched rituals. Female genital mutilation, a rite of passage into womanhood, is one of them. This film presents a collection of testimonies of those who confront this tradition. Of those who fight it and, more often, those who suffer its consequences.

It has been more than fifty years since the first stone of the Berlin Wall was laid in 1961, later to be torn down but today the world still seems inexorably crossed by walls, both visible and invisible. Walls that divide and exacerbate the differences, walls that feed ethnic and religious hatred, walls that raise barriers between races and skin colors; walls that create conflicts all over the world. This documentary shot mainly around the border between Nogales, Arizona, USA, and Nogales, Sonora, Mexico is the border that divides the U.S. from Mexico...

“That Parallel Universe” is a documentary of old media trying to understand new media, a look at the virtual lives of people who are so desperate to get attention on the internet that they will do anything, just to get more clicks. It’s a social commentary about the specific characteristics of different online communities in Asia, what makes for a phenomenal “meme” in certain countries, what happens to overnight internet stars after they become yesterday’s news, what it is like to live almost exclusively in that parallel universe, and what it is like when the two universes should collide.
